Biofuels are touted as one of the most promising new, clean technologies that will replace foreign oil and reduce greenhouse gas emissions. The California Center for Environmental Law & Policy offers this colloquium to explore a range of legal and policy issues raised by biofuel research, development and commercialization.

A distinguished panel of government, energy and legal experts will share their insights and recommendations regarding the law and policy implications of biofuels development.

An introductory session on "Biofuels for the Layperson," presented by Rich Plevin, PhD candidate, Energy Resources Group, will be offered at 11:45 a.m., before the panel discussion.

Schedule: The introductory session will begin at 11:45; lunch will be served at 12:15; the panel discussion will begin at 12:45.

This program will be available as a webcast after the event, at:
