

Thelton E. Henderson Center for Social Justice

Social Justice Thursday

Date: Thursday, August 27, 2009

Time: 12:45 - 1:45 p.m.

Location: 122-Boalt

Tips for Thriving in Law School

Join us for a discussion at our first Social Justice Thursday. We will talk about perspectives and techniques for making this first semester easier for those of you who have come to law school with a social justice commitment. There will also be a chance for you to learn more about your fellow students so that you can begin to build a more extensive support system.

Social Justice Thursday seminars look at the first year curriculum and legal education in general through a social justice lens and build a community of students interested in social justice issues. During these gatherings students have an opportunity to talk frankly with one another and with faculty about raising issues of privilege, race, class, gender, and sexuality in class and about how to navigate the first year successfully.

Lunch is first-come, first-served.

Please bring your own beverage.