

COLLOQUIUM ON INTERNATIONAL LAW AND POLITICS

Spring 2012

Fri. 11:20 am–1:00 p.m., Room 132

Professors Katerina Linos and Saira Mohamed

1 credit; credit/no credit

In this Colloquium, participants will address some of the most challenging questions of international law and politics by studying the cutting-edge work of the field's leading scholars. Each class meeting will feature a guest speaker who will present their research; subjects include issues in international trade, global administrative law, international criminal law, and international legal theory. Participants will benefit not only from immersion in varied fields of research in international law, but also from exposure to and participation in scholarly workshops.

The course meets seven times during the semester. Colloquium students will be expected to produce short comments in response to the assigned workshop papers and to actively participate in workshop discussion at each meeting.

Our schedule is as follows:

- Jan. 20: Rachel Brewster (Assistant Professor of Law, Harvard Law School)
- Feb. 3: Anu Bradford (Assistant Professor of Law, University of Chicago Law School)
- Feb. 17: David J. Scheffer (Mayer Brown/Robert A. Helman Professor of Law and Director, Center for International Human Rights, Northwestern University School of Law)
