INHA UNIVERSITY

WELCOME MESSAGE

It is our pleasure to extend a warm invitation to attend the "International Conference: Law of the Sea - A Half Century after the Geneva Conventions" in Seoul in October 2007.

Following its successful conference last year, it is a great pleasure and privilege for me and INHA University to co-organize this important academic conference with the prestigious Law of the Sea Institute (LOSI) at UC Berkeley.

The main issues that will be addressed in this conference are: The Heritage of Colonialism and Imperialism in Relation to Territorial Disputes and Maritime Questions; Maritime Questions of the North Korea and the Law of the Sea; Procedures Followed in International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and Other International Adjudicative Bodies; Maritime Boundary Delimitation and the Cooperative Management of Transboundary Resources; and The History of the Maritime Disputes Resolution during the Past Five Decades.

The INHA-LOSI International Conference Seoul 2007 will serve as a platform for academics, international lawyers, policy makers, and other professionals to present the latest findings in law of the sea issues.

We hope to address commonly asked questions, and develop new strategies for better appreciation of how such questions can be answered.

Together with Professors Harry N. Scheiber and David Caron, co-directors of LOSI, we cordially invite you to join us in rewarding experience at the INHA-LOSI International Conference Seoul 2007.

Dr. Seoung-Yong Hong,
President, INHA University, Korea

WELCOME MESSAGE

The Law of the Sea Institute at the University of California, Berkeley, is honored to cooperate once again with our Inha University colleagues in this conference, our second collaborative effort in Seoul following the successful event of a year ago.

The LOSI has conducted conferences and issued publications over a period of more than forty years, contributing to scholarship and public discourse on a broad range of questions in law, policy, and ethics associated with humankind's uses of the global oceans. Since the LOSI was reorganized in 2002-3 as a research unit of the University of California, under auspices of the Boalt Hall School of Law and the university's Institute for Legal Research, we have had the honor of close cooperation with several overseas colleagues, research institutes, and universities. It is especially gratifying that Inha University has forged such close ties with us for this special series of conferences, which we plan shall be continued in fall of 2008 at Berkeley.

In this collaboration, we have incurred a great debt to President Seoung-Yong Hong, a major figure in the history of LOSI and in the scholarship and jurisprudence of ocean law; to Prof. Jon Van Dyke of the University of Hawai'i, distinguished scholar and a member of the international board of LOSI; and to the Korean sponsors who have contributed to funding. Special thanks are owed to Prof. Seok-Woo Lee, whose organizing genius and great devotion to the project have been instrumental in bringing our plans to fruition here in Seoul.

To all the distinguished speakers and panelists gathered here, I also bring greetings from Prof. David Caron, co-director with me of LOSI, and Dean Christopher Edley, Dean of Boalt Hall School Law, a warm supporter of this event and of our collaboration with the Inha University faculty.

Harry N. Scheiber,

Co-director LOSI, and the Riesenfeld Chair Professor of Law and History, UC Berkeley
