Berkeley Law is generating an applicant pool of qualified temporary instructors to teach courses in our J.D. degree program should an opening arise.

Berkeley Law is one of the premier law schools in the United States. Our J.D. program is demanding, engaging, hands-on, and selective. The diverse and constantly evolving curriculum offers hundreds of courses, including dozens in our top-ranked Intellectual Property, International Law, Social Justice, and Environmental Law programs. We expect our faculty and lecturers to demonstrate a strong commitment to academic vigor, multidisciplinary research, and intellectual diversity. Please see http://www.law.berkeley.edu/145.htm for curricular details.

General Duties: In addition to teaching responsibilities, general duties include holding office hours, assessing student work and assigning grades, advising students, identifying and preparing course materials (e.g., syllabus), and maintaining a course website.

Basic Qualifications: J.D. or equivalent and legal practice experience in the area in which the applicant seeks to teach is required at time of application.

Preferred Qualifications: Experience teaching law school courses, with outstanding student and peer evaluations.

Salary: Our starting annual full-time salary is $45,975, prorated according to teaching workload. Generally, the salary for an instructor teaching one course for a semester at the law school ranges from $3,792 to $7,585 depending on the associated workload.

Application Procedure: To apply, please go to the following link: https://aprecruit.berkeley.edu/apply/JPF00332. Applicants should submit (a) a cover letter describing their interest in teaching and identifying the course(s) they propose to teach; (b) their curriculum vitae; and (c) a short (1-2 paragraph) description of the course(s).

To receive full consideration for any openings please submit a complete application. Completed applications will be reviewed as openings arise.

The applicant pool will close on December 1, 2015; candidates who have yet to receive an offer and who are interested in remaining in the pool after that time will need to submit a new application.

Please direct questions to: academicpositions@law.berkeley.edu

Berkeley Law is interested in candidates who will contribute to diversity and equal opportunity in higher education through their teaching. Qualified women and members of underrepresented minority groups are strongly encouraged to apply.
