

Jane L. Scheiber is a research associate in the Center for the Study of Law and Society. She is also Special Assistant to the Dean of the College of Chemistry, UC Berkeley, where she recently retired as Assistant Dean. After graduate study in American history at Cornell University, she served as Public Affairs Laboratory Director at Dartmouth College and then as Editorial Director and Associate Project Director of Courses by Newspaper (an adult education program) at UCSD. She is editor or co-editor of ten books, including such works as America and the Future of Man (1973); In Search of the American Dream (with Robert Elliott, 1974); American Issues Forum (with Daniel Aaron et al, 1976); and Crime and Justice (with Jerome Skolnick and Martin Forst, 1977). She has written about the African-American community and civil rights in World War I and, with coauthor Harry Scheiber, has written several articles and is now completing a book about civil rights and liberties in Hawaii during World War II.
