

Berkeley Center for Law, Business and the Economy &
Institutions and Governance Program Present...

Global Unemployment

Global Financial & Economic Crisis Series

Despite recent upticks in the economy, the U.S. and worldwide employment picture continues to be bleak. Are we facing a "jobless recovery?" Did the international economic collapse in 2008-09 alter the labor market permanently? What employment patterns and prospects should we expect as global markets and economies recover? Join a panel of distinguished UC Berkeley scholars who will answer these questions, explore the role of international organizations such as the G20 in addressing them, and offer proposals to prevent protectionism and promote a global solution.

Wednesday
October 28th, 2009
12:30 pm
Booth Auditorium
Berkeley Law School

A panel discussion featuring:

John Quigley
Goldman School of Public Policy

Brad DeLong
Department of Economics

David Card
Department of Economics

Andy Rose
Haas Business School

Co-Sponsored by Institute for Research on Labor and Employment