How Do I...
find Non-Legal Research Databases?

Law students have access to both the legal databases maintained by the Law Library and interdisciplinary databases maintained by the Main Library. Both can be accessed via the Research tab on the Law Library homepage.

The Main Library provides research guides on topics like How to Find Articles and Databases and Text Mining and Computational Analysis.

1539 DATABASES | Search for Databases | Go

All Subjects | All Database Types | All Vendors / Providers

Available databases can be sorted by Subject, Type, and Provider. Database types include:

- News resources like Access World News and ProQuest Major Daily Newspapers, with current and historic local, national, and international news.
- Historic resources like American History, providing access to primary source documents from 1492 to 1945, and Historical Statistics of the United States, tracking historic demographic data and allowing data table creation.
- Specialized archival collections like American Indian Newspapers and Congressional Research Service Reports.

The Main Library also provides access to several video streaming databases:

- Use Kanopy to find high-use local and indie films
- Use Docuseek2 to find documentary films from independent producers
- Use Academic Video Online to find subject-area films on a variety of academic topics
