University of California Human Rights Center Fellowship

The Human Rights Center is pleased to announce the annual competition for student fellowships in partnership with organizations working for human rights. Registered students at UC Berkeley and the Graduate Theological Union are eligible, with priority given to graduate and returning students. Prior recipients of Human Rights Center fellowships are not eligible. The amount of the fellowship stipend will be $5,000.

These awards will enable students to carry out clearly defined fieldwork, domestically or internationally, with organizations working on human rights issues related to a student’s area of interest. Applicants must plan to spend at least 6-8 weeks full time or its equivalent part-time working with a partner organization to qualify for the fellowship.

The purpose of the fellowship is to provide students with an opportunity to contribute to the organizations’ work while also gaining practical experience that may influence the students’ areas of research, academic focus, or career trajectory. Partnerships with both governmental and non-governmental organizations are acceptable, so long as the affiliation enables the proposed human rights work. Multi-disciplinary approaches to human rights fieldwork are welcomed.

Brazil Fellowship 2016:

As part of our Fellowship Program that enables students from University of California campuses to work with human rights organizations globally, the Human Rights Center is offering a special 2016 UC Human Rights Center Fellowship to a UC Berkeley student interested in conducting research on the needs of teenagers who have survived human trafficking.

The 2016 fellowship is open to a qualified graduate or undergraduate student seeking to contribute knowledge and understanding about how NGOs and/or local government agencies are supporting children and adolescents as they return to a “normal life” after situations of sexual exploitation in the urban context of Brazil.

It is estimated that Brazil has some 30 million teenagers—one of the largest adolescent populations in the world. Given that children and adolescents who are likely to fall prey of trafficking are a marginalized, disenfranchised, vulnerable population to begin with, how are government agencies and NGOs looking at addressing the trauma victims face, and how are they providing tools for their development into healthy

Questions about the Brazil fellowship and the Fellowship Program at the Human Rights Center can be directed to Fellowship Coordinator Julie Lagarde at jlagarde@berkeley.edu or Communications Manager Andrea Lampros at alampros@berkeley.edu or 510.642-0965.
The Human Rights Center Fellowships
The application must articulate the human rights issue to be addressed and the parameters, objectives, goals, and expected outcomes of their proposed fieldwork. Fundamental changes to accepted proposals (e.g., different human rights topic, new partner organization, alternate location) are not permitted. Applicants for the Brazil fellowship may propose a partner organization or ask the center for a recommended partner organization before completing the application.

Human Rights Fellowship benefits and expectations:
• Receive a $5,000 stipend to support their work.
• Attend an orientation to prepare for summer fieldwork (April 18)
• Submit an informal mid-term report from the field (July/August)
• Attend an informal gathering upon return from the field (September 19)
• Present at a formal conference held during the fall semester (November 4)
• Submit a final project (publishable op-ed, news piece, or video) at the end (November 4)
• Complete all assignments and participate in all fellowship events in person.

If you are selected as a UC Human Rights Fellow, you will be considered for a two-week collaborative residency at Mesa Refuge from August 12–August 25, 2016, in Point Reyes, California. Mesa Refuge is a writers' retreat that is intended to provide a quiet and inspiring space for people writing about ways to create a more just and sustainable world. Please indicate in your application whether you are interested in being considered for this residency and how you would plan to use the time (see below for statement guidelines).

For more information, visit www.mesarefuge.org.

A complete application includes:
1. A completed application cover sheet and signed application checklist.
2. A curriculum vitae/resume, indicating all experience (academic studies, fieldwork, volunteer work, and paid work) relevant to the fellowship.
3. Statement of purpose (2–5 pages, doubled-spaced, 12-point font), describing your interest in the award. This section of the application should address the following questions:
   • What human rights issue will be addressed during the fellowship?
   Does an article of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights address the issue and, if not, how do you think the issue relates to human rights?
   • How will you work with your partner organization to address this issue?
   • How will your fieldwork contribute to the partner organization’s ongoing mission/goals?
   • Why are you interested in addressing this issue? Do you have a particular interest/expertise/experience in this area?
   • What are the objectives/goals/expected outcomes of your proposed fieldwork?
   • How will these outcomes be measured or evaluated?
   • How will the fellowship build on your current academic interests?
   • What role will the fellowship play in your long-term career or study plans?
   • Have you spent time in your proposed geographic area and/or working on your proposed topic? If so, outline your previous experience that specifically pertains to your proposed fellowship work. If not, describe how you will prepare yourself for your proposed fellowship work. Address any issues related to fluency in a language other than English.

4. A letter of recommendation from someone in a position to affirm the value of the fellowship in the context of your academic work and interests (preferably a UC Berkeley professor). The letter may be addressed to Fellowship Coordinator Julie Lagarde and sent to humanrightsfellows@gmail.com.

5. A letter of support from the partner organization detailing the mission/goals of the organization and how your proposed fieldwork will contribute to its work. Interested applicants who do not have a partner organization in mind should contact the Human Rights Center immediately for recommendations. This letter should address the following points:
   • Who will be your main point person at the organization?
   • In which ways will you be supporting the organization?
   • In which ways will the organization be supporting you?
   • What are you expected to accomplish during your fellowship?
   • How will the organization benefit from your accomplishments?

6. Applicants are strongly encouraged to meet with the fellowship coordinator or other HRC staff prior to submission.

7. (if applicable) A one page statement on your interest in the Mesa Refuge Collaborative Residency which should answer the following questions:
   • What do you intend to write (academic paper, long form journalism piece, other)?
   • What is your intended audience?
   • What do you hope to accomplish with your writing?

- Recommendation letters (for Berkeley applicants only) may be sent by email directly to: humanrightsfellows@gmail.com.
- The deadline for applications and all supporting documents is Tuesday, February 23, 2016, 4 pm P.S.T.
- Applicants must submit their complete application in PDF format by the deadline to humanrightsfellows@gmail.com. The letters of recommendation must be sent by the deadline directly by the recommenders to humanrightsfellows@gmail.com. Incomplete applications will not be considered.
- Applicants will be notified by mid-March 2016.

Committee for the Protection of Human Subjects:

If you intend to use the fellowship grant to conduct research that you will include in your thesis or dissertation, you should consider whether approval from the Committee for the Protection of Human Subjects (CPHS) is necessary. For more information, please speak with your faculty advisor or visit your campus’s CPHS website. IRB review can be a very lengthy process. We encourage applicants to start the process as soon as possible.
