IN THIS REPORT:
Survey on Accountability and Social Reconstruction in the Central African Republic

Human Rights Fellowship Program
Human Rights, Technology, and New Media Initiative
MISSION

The Human Rights Center at the University of California, Berkeley is an independent research center housed in the Law School that applies scientific methods and innovative technologies to promote human rights and international humanitarian law. We use our research to develop and recommend policy measures to protect vulnerable populations. We provide students and advocates with the skills and tools to document violations of human rights and to turn this information into effective action.

STAFF AND FELLOWS

HUMAN RIGHTS CENTER STAFF

ERIC STOVER
Faculty Director
Adjunct Professor of Law and Public Health

CAMILLE CRITTENDEN
Executive Director

MICHELLE AREVALO-CARPENTER
Graduate Student Researcher

MELISSA CARNAY
Program Officer

VERONICA GUZMAN
Director, DNA Reunification Project

LAUREN HARRIS
Graduate Student Researcher

NEIL HENDRICK
Mobile Technology Specialist

LIZA JIMENEZ
Office Manager

ALEX Koenig
Graduate Student Researcher

BRENDA MUÑOZ
Graduate Student Researcher

PHUONG PHAM
Director of Research

KRISTIN REED
Director, Human Rights Fellowship Program

KIM THUY SEELINGER
Director, Sexual Violence and Accountability Project

PATRICK VINCK
Director, Initiative for Vulnerable Populations

SENIOR RESEARCH FELLOWS

RICHARD PIERRE CLAUDE

SARAH WARSHAUER FREEDMAN

VINCENT IACOPINO

ANDREW MOSS

GILLES PERESS

HARVEY WEINSTEIN

HUMAN RIGHTS CENTER FELLOWS

PATRICK BALL

MYCHELLE BALTHAZARD

KARL SCHOENBERGER

DAVID TULLER
FROM THE DIRECTORS

This past year our faculty and staff at the Human Rights Center—not to mention our intrepid student fellows—covered tens of thousands of miles on justice and human rights projects that took them to over 40 countries.

Highlights of the Human Rights Center’s research include the publication of The Guantanamo Effect, an unprecedented study of U.S. interrogation and detention practices, based on interviews with 62 former detainees and numerous key informants who have worked at the site. The book was published by the University of California Press and written in collaboration with the International Human Rights Law Clinic.

Meanwhile, our Initiative for Vulnerable Populations completed two population-based surveys, one in northern Uganda and another in the Central African Republic. Both projects advanced the digital data-collection techniques pioneered by the Kobo Project, which aims to assist researchers collect, secure, and analyze data in challenging environments.

In Kampala, Uganda, we partnered with the Open Society Justice Initiative to organize a panel on innovative approaches to court outreach at the first Review Conference of the International Criminal Court.

In El Salvador, we continued to work with the Asociación Pro-Búsqueda de Niñas y Niños Desaparecidos (The Organization for Disappeared Children) and the Alliance of Forensic Scientists for Human Rights and Humanitarian Investigations. Now in its tenth year the project uses DNA analysis to reunite families divided during that country’s civil war.

On campus, we marked a key institutional milestone by moving the Human Rights Center to the Law School. The move was commemorated in April with a symposium featuring a keynote address by Boalt alumnus Michael Posner, Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor.

Finally, in January, we launched the Sexual Violence and Accountability Project. This new initiative aims to improve the capacity of prosecutors, law enforcement, forensic scientists, and health professionals to collect evidence of sexual violence, protect victims and witnesses, and ensure that survivors receive medical and psychosocial services in times of war and political violence.

None of this would have been possible without the generous support of our project partners and supporters. We thank all of you!

Sincerely,

Eric Stover   Camille Crittenden
Faculty Director   Executive Director
RESEARCH PROFILES

BUILDING PEACE, SEEKING JUSTICE:
UNDERSTANDING WAR-AFFECTED COMMUNITIES IN THE CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Thousands of civilians are affected by poverty, displacement, and violence in the Central African Republic
For decades, the Central African Republic (CAR) has experienced violence, economic stagnation, and institutional failure. The latest wave of violence erupted in 2001 and continues to this day in some areas. Yet despite this, little attention has been paid to the conflict and even less research has documented and quantified the conflict’s human cost.

In the fall of 2009, Human Rights Center researchers Phuong Pham and Patrick Vinck assembled a research team in the Central African Republic to study the scope and magnitude of violence committed against citizens during armed conflict and capture a snapshot of what the citizens of CAR believe is the best way to restore peace. Funded by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation and Humanity United, researchers employed PDAs to collect data digitally with Kobo, a suite of programs developed at the Human Rights Center for conducting surveys (see update on the Human Rights and Technology Initiative).

The resulting report, Building Peace, Seeking Justice: A Population-Based Survey on Attitudes about Accountability and Social Reconstruction in the Central African Republic, sheds light on the scale of a situation largely unknown to the international community. The data gathered from the study presents a stark picture of life in the Central African Republic. More than three-quarters of respondents said they had either witnessed or personally experienced traumatic events during the wave of violence that began in 2001, and more than half met criteria for depression or anxiety. The monthly death rate was five per 1,000 individuals (in the United States it is 0.7; the average for sub-Saharan Africa is 1.3). In other words, 6 percent of the country’s population is dying every year.

Building Peace, Seeking Justice includes a number of specific recommendations for the CAR government, armed groups, civil society, the international community, and the International Criminal Court. The report’s suggestions include the effective disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration of combatants back into society; holding free and fair presidential elections; reforming the security sector; and bringing those responsible for violations of human rights and international humanitarian law to justice. Download the report at http://hrc.berkeley.edu/car.html.

KEY FINDINGS

Widespread exposure to violence and human rights abuses:
- Four out of five respondents (81%) have had to flee their home at some point during the various conflicts since 2002.
- Twenty percent of respondents have reported being beaten or physically attacked, and 11 percent have been abducted.
- 67 percent said they had been threatened with death.
- 11 percent reported having been abducted.
- 16 percent said they had been coerced to work with armed groups and sometimes forced to commit violence.
- Respondents identified murder (91%), theft and destruction of property (66%), and sexual violence (52%) as the principle crimes committed by combatants.

Pessimism about whether peace can be achieved:
- Only about half of respondents believe it is possible to live in peace in CAR (54%) and with neighboring countries (50%).

Justice mechanisms:
- Respondents prefer trials conducted in CAR. Over half of respondents (52%) said they should be tried in national courts, while 27% said they should be tried in CAR by an international court. Fourteen percent preferred international trials outside the country.
DNA REUNIFICATION PROJECT

Social media has proved to be an effective tool for Human Rights Center investigators working on the DNA Reunification Project to find young people adopted from El Salvador during that country’s armed conflict (1980–92). This past year, HRC staff have located six new adoptees whose biological family members in El Salvador have been searching for them for many years. After exhausting all avenues and outlets to find them, project staff turned to Facebook as a potentially powerful resource, considering the social networking site has more than 500 million active users. As a result, three adoptees were located—one is in contact with her biological family, and the other two are currently in the reunification process. In addition to its utility as a search tool for staff, Facebook has also given adoptees an opportunity to respond to our inquiries and stay connected with their families.

PROGRAM AREAS 2009–2010

THE HUMAN RIGHTS, TECHNOLOGY, AND NEW MEDIA INITIATIVE

UPDATES FROM THE MOBILE CHALLENGE

As part of last year’s conference, “The Soul of the New Machine: Human Rights, Technology, and New Media,” the Human Rights Center partnered with TechSoup Global to host the Human Rights Center Mobile Challenge. The Mobile Challenge invited submissions from nonprofits and advocacy organizations to develop mobile tools that combine data, imagery, mapping and social networking to advance human rights, and ultimately received 50 project submissions from 23 countries. Ten finalists were selected by online community vote, and award winners, selected by a panel of judges, were announced at the conference. We checked in with the three award winners on their accomplishments in the past year since the Challenge.

First Place: The Guardian Project: Secure, private mobile communications

The Guardian Project is an open-source application suite that enables secure, private mobile communications. In the last year, the Guardian Project has managed to make a number of breakthroughs toward building an open-source, secure smartphone, for human rights advocates, journalists and everyday people concerned with privacy around the world. Guardian adapted the popular Tor anonymity tool for mobile devices, released a privacy-enhanced web browser, improved the security of mobile chat, and partnered with other projects to deliver encrypted SMS, Voice-Over-IP and a public-key based email solution. Currently the Guardian Project is planning to collaborate with other projects including Ushahidi and OpenDataKit, to enable security-enhanced versions of their software for the Android platform.

Second Place: Freedom Fone: Mobile phone marries interactive audio programming

Freedom Fone is a free, open-source information and communication tool, which brings together the mobile phone with Interactive Voice Response (IVR). Developed by the Kubatana Trust, Freedom Fone empowers non-technical organizations to build automated dial-up information services that are available to the public 24/7. In March 2010, the first user-friendly version of Freedom Fone was publicly released, and in July Kubatana issued a second release (v1.6) that improved the user interface and simplified some of the components. Several information services have been created, including an arts and culture line during the Harare International Festival of the Arts, a constitution-related information service, and a mini audio drama that focuses on sexual harassment in the workplace.

Third Place: Handheld Human Rights: Making human rights data accessible and actionable

Handheld Human Rights (HHR) uses mobile phones, digital pens and, and open-source platforms to create secure communication and mapping. The program helps human rights groups communicate internally as well as promote their work internationally to lawyers, advocates, and community organizations. In late 2009, HHR held trainings and technological capacity evaluations with numerous human rights organizations along the Thai-Burma border and mapped human rights abuses in Burma with data from Martus, news organizations, and grassroots human rights groups based in Southeast Asia. This summer they added an election layer to visualize information being gathered by the Burma Partnership through their 2010 Election Watch initiative. In addition to long-distance support to help local groups begin updating the system in real-time, HHR is planning another trip to the Thai-Burma border this fall to conduct trainings with users, focusing on security and strategy, in advance of the November elections.

THE KOBO PROJECT

Mobile technology for secure data collection

Kobo is a project of the Human Rights Center that aims to make digital data-gathering tools available to the research community at no cost. The Human Rights Center’s mobile technologist Neil Hendrick has worked closely with Phuong Pham in programming a suite of software that allows individuals to gather survey data using a handheld mobile device and aggregate the information to one centralized place. The HRC research team has successfully used its Android-based software to collect data in Uganda and the Central African Republic, and has partnered with several international NGOs. The Kobo team is currently developing a forms builder that would allow non-technical users to build their own surveys and plans to release the software later to the public.
The Human Rights Fellowship Program provides opportunities for students to work with human rights organizations worldwide. Now in its 17th year, the program offers fellowships to students from six University of California campuses. We are pleased to recognize the 2010 Fellows:

SANDRA ALVAREZ, SANTA CRUZ
Asociación de Autoridades Tradicionales y Cabildos U’wa (Colombia); Holistic Defense Advocacy: Restorative Justice in an Urban Community

MADELEINE BAIR, BERKELEY
Jamaicans for Justice (Jamaica); From Victim to Victor: The Women Speak

TEO BALLvé, BERKELEY
Verdad Abierta (Colombia); Narco, Inc.: The Drug Economy’s Violent Spaces of Fortune

LARA CUSHING, BERKELEY
Inter-American Association for Environmental Defense (Mexico); Protecting Vulnerable Communities in a Warming World

KATIE DINGEMAN, IRVINE
Central American Resource Center (Los Angeles, CA); Coerced Transnationality: Deportation and the Forced Separation of Salvadoran Families

MICHELLE DIZON, BERKELEY
Focus on the Global South (Philippines); Perpetual Peace

UGO FELICIA EDU, BERKELEY
A Cor da Bahia (Brazil); Perspectives on Reproductive Choice: Women’s Stories of Tubal Ligation and Other Contraceptives

PATIENCE FIELDING, BERKELEY
International Federation of Women Lawyers (Cameroon); Rights to Literacy: An Examination of Child Workers in a Developing Country

LEXA GRAYNER, HASTINGS
Bridges Across Borders Southeast Asia (Thailand); Empowering Migrant Communities in Thailand through Justice Education

Learn more about the Fellows’ projects at http://hrc.berkeley.edu/current_fellows.html. The Fellowship Program is supported by grants from the UC Office of the President, the Tang Opportunity Fund, and Thomas J. White. Please contact Executive Director Camille Crittenden at ccrittenden@berkeley.edu for more information or to make a contribution.
Research and expert commentary from the Human Rights Center have been cited in numerous publications over the past year. The selective list below offers highlights of articles and media channels where work by Human Rights Center staff and affiliated researchers has appeared between August 2009 and August 2010.

NEWS MEDIA

ARTICLES, REPORTS, OP-EDS

PUBLICATIONS

BOOK CHAPTERS

BOOK

JOURNAL
The Human Rights Center and the Center for the Study of Violence and Reconciliation in South Africa are institutional sponsors of the International Journal of Transitional Justice, published by Oxford University Press and co-edited by HRC Senior Research Fellow Harvey Weinstein.
The Human Rights Center sponsors or co-sponsors public events to bring leading experts to the UC Berkeley campus and community. We are grateful to our many partners who help make these events possible. The following list is a sample of these programs.

HIGHLIGHTED EVENTS:

ICC REVIEW CONFERENCE
In early June the Human Rights Center participated in the International Criminal Court’s (ICC) Review Conference of the Rome Statute, hosted in Kampala, Uganda. Faculty Director Eric Stover chaired the Stocktaking Plenary on the “Impact of the Rome Statute on Victims and Affected Communities.” In addition, the Center co-hosted a side panel with the Open Society Justice Initiative on innovative approaches to outreach, moderated by David Tolbert of the International Center for Transitional Justice, and featured the Human Rights Center’s Patrick Vinck, Binta Mansaray of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, Claudia Perdomo of the ICC Outreach Program, and representatives of innovative civil society programs.

OUTREACH AND INTERNATIONAL WAR CRIMES TRIBUNALS
In August, the Human Rights Center hosted a three-day workshop with outreach officials from the ICC and other international criminal tribunals as well as representatives of non-governmental organizations. Participants discussed the challenges outreach practitioners face as they try to communicate the work of international tribunals to war-affected communities. The event provided an opportunity for international criminal justice outreach practitioners to benefit from each others’ experiences and spur new and innovative thinking about outreach strategies. The outcomes from the workshop will be included in a report to be published by the Open Society Justice Initiative in early 2011.

CAMPUS AND PUBLIC EVENTS

The United Nations Experience with the Guatemalan Conflict: Understanding the Past, Preparing for the Future. Dr. Christian Tomuschat, Former Commissioner, United Nations Commission on Clarification of the Past, Guatemala, August 18, 2009

Cambodian Democracy and Human Rights Under Siege: One Woman’s Fight. Mu Sochua, Member of the Cambodian Parliament, September 14, 2009

UCSF School of Medicine and Global Strategies for AIDS Prevention Roundtable. Roundtable, October 12, 2009

Human Rights Advocacy: Mobilizing Action in the Visual Age. Panel Discussion, October 27, 2009

Critical Factors Shaping the Future of Sudan: A Roundtable Discussion. The Hon. Ezekiel Lol Gatkuoth and Roger Winter, January 26, 2010

International Criminal Court Outreach and Interactive Radio for Justice, Wanda Hall, February 1, 2010

Helping Rebuild a Post-Conflict State: Opportunities and Challenges in Sierra Leone, hosted by The Miller Institute for Global Challenges and the Law and International Professional Partnerships for Sierra Leone. Elan Emanuel, Fellow, Miller Institute and International Professional Partnerships for Sierra Leone, April 6, 2010

We recognize with gratitude the individuals and organizations that have supported our work between July 2009 and August 2010.

INDIVIDUALS

Anonymous
Reuben and Phyllis Aaronson
Paul Franz Albert
Robert and Evelyn Apte
Starrs Arnot
Allen and Michele Asch
Robert and Carol Beitcher
Phyllis Burgess-Beraud
Colin and Louise Campbell
Camille Crittenden and John R. Palmer
Amy Danforth Stover
Richard Edlund
Ruth Eisenberg and Greg Hendren
Elizabeth Farnsworth
Brendan Flannery
Norah Foster
Bryn Freedman
Brian George
Deborah and Stephen Goldblatt
Elizabeth Anne Griffiths
Barbara Grob and Anthony Cascardi
Fred Grob
Michael Hall
Jeffrey Harlacker
Dr. Elizabeth Havice
David Heiden and Katherine Seligman
Adam Hochschild
Kathryn Jones and Brian Washburn
David and Anita Keller
Sophia Kingman
Penka Kouneva
Ralph A. Kuiper
Sandra M. LaFramboise
Kwan-Siu and Siu Yin Leung
Tracey Loeb
Teresa Luchsinger
May Luke
Greg and Liz Lutz
Diana Malin
Joseph Matza
Jigar Mehta

Colin Mossman
Victor Peskin
Dr. Ellen M. Prager
Liz Ralston
Charles Saldana
Dr. Herbert Schreier
Steven Scott
George Sensabaugh
Andrew Sessler
Jane Slater
Eric Stover and Pamela Blotner
John Swallow
Darian and Rick Swig
Nadine Tang and Bruce Smith
Tida Violante
Hon. Rebecca Westerfield
Thomas J. White

INSTITUTIONS

Compton Foundation
Humanity United
John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation
Open Society Institute
Open Society Justice Initiative
Sandler Foundation
USAID
U.S. State Department, Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights & Labor

IN-KIND CONTRIBUTIONS

Alliance of Forensic Scientists for Human Rights and Humanitarian Investigations
Chromosomal Laboratories
Efilm
Salesforce.com
Solio

UNIVERSITY PARTNERS

School of Law: Office of the Dean, International Human Rights Law Clinic
Office of the Chancellor and Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost
University of California, Office of the President
LOOKING AHEAD

LIBERIA
With funding from Humanity United, the Human Rights Center will conduct a nationwide, population-based survey in Fall 2010 and publish a report on attitudes about justice, accountability, and social reconstruction in Liberia. The report will be used to open a dialogue between the government, NGOs, and other agencies about issues that are key to the successful transition from war to peace.

CAMBODIA
In the fall of 2008, the Human Rights Center conducted a national population-based survey about knowledge and attitudes toward social reconstruction and the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC). Later this year the Human Rights Center research team will travel to Cambodia to conduct a follow-up survey, which will serve as a tool to monitor public awareness and knowledge of the work of the ECCC as well as outreach and victim-participation initiatives by the tribunal and local nongovernmental organizations. The survey will reassess attitudes about justice and the desire for reparations for past crimes. It will recommend ways in which the ECCC, civil society, and the international community can continue to engage Cambodians in the work of the court.

UGANDA
This spring the Human Rights Center team returned to northern Uganda to conduct a third population-based study on peace, justice, and social reconstruction in light of relative peace. The survey captured the needs of northern Ugandans and measured change in overall priorities, exposure to violence, and sense of security during what appears to be a transitional phase of peace and resettlement of internally displaced populations in the North. The report will be released later this fall.

SEXUAL VIOLENCE AND ACCOUNTABILITY
Sexual violence, especially rape, has added its own brand of shame to recent wars and political upheavals around the world. From conflicts in eastern Congo, Nepal, and Burma to election violence in Kenya and Zimbabwe, military and police personnel and non-state actors have used sexual violence to physically and psychologically devastate victims and rend the social fabric of communities, often with impunity. While the recent combined jurisprudence of international and hybrid courts—including the International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia and the Sierra Leone Special Court—has increased pressure on all societies to investigate and adjudicate sex crimes, a number of challenges remain. These include protecting victims and witnesses before and after trial, providing victims with adequate medical and psychosocial treatment, properly evaluating victim testimony, and encouraging prosecutors to attach sufficient priority to the investigation of sexual assault.

The Human Rights Center is proud to launch a three-part initiative to promote accountability and access to justice for sexual violence in armed conflict and political unrest. The Sexual Violence and Accountability Project aims to improve the capacity of prosecutors, law enforcement personnel, judges, and human rights investigators to collect testimonial, documentary, and physical evidence of sexual violence to aid victims and facilitate prosecutions. Over the next three years the initiative will include a series of workshops, case studies, and the development of a practitioner handbook on minimum standards and procedures for investigating sexual violence in armed conflict. Human Rights Center staff are currently planning a multi-stakeholder workshop on sexual violence and accountability to be hosted in Nairobi in the first half of 2011.
Most citizens in northern Uganda have returned home from IDP camps and are now in the process of rebuilding.
FACULTY COUNCIL AND ADVISORY BOARD

ADVISORY BOARD
- Herbert M. and Marion O. Sandler, Honorary Co-Chairs
- Stewart Beck, Consul General of Canada
- Christopher Edley, Dean, School of Law
- Elizabeth Farnsworth, Special Correspondent, Lehrer NewsHour
- Lance Gima, Alliance of Forensic Scientists for Humanitarian and Human Rights Investigations
- Deborah Goldblatt, Community volunteer
- Adam Hochschild, Author and Faculty, School of Journalism
- David Keller, Community volunteer
- Martina Knee, Bay Area Save Darfur Coalition
- Liz Lutz, Community volunteer
- Juan Méndez, Scholar in Residence, Ford Foundation
- Darian W. Swig, Article 3 Advisors
- Hon. Rebecca Westerfield (ret.), Mediator
- Thomas J. White, Chief Scientific Officer, Celera

FACULTY COUNCIL
- Richard Buxbaum, Law
- David Caron, Law
- David Cohen, Rhetoric
- Mark Danner, Journalism
- Chris Edley, Law
- Laurel Fletcher, Law
- Mary Louise Frampton, Law
- Sarah Freedman, Education
- Ken Goldberg, Berkeley Center for New Media
- Jodi Halpern, Public Health
- Gillian Hart, Geography
- Charles Henry, African American Studies
- Neil Henry, Journalism
- Kate Jastram, Law
- Ray Lifchez, Architecture
- Beatriz Manz, Ethnic Studies
- Ali Miller, Law
- Art Reingold, Public Health
- Lee Riley, Public Health
- Ananya Roy, City and Regional Planning
- Andrew Sessler, Lawrence Berkeley Lab
- Harley Shaiken, Education
- Helene Silverberg, Political Science and Law
- Jonathan Simon, Law
- Bruce Smith, Psychology
- Sarah Song, Political Science, Law
- Eric Stover, Human Rights Center, Law, Public Health
- John Swartzberg, Public Health
- Alan Tansman, East Asian Studies
- Khatharya Um, Asian American Studies
- Michael Watts, Geography
- Harvey Weinstein, Human Rights Center, Public Health
- John Wilmoth, Demography
PHOTO CREDITS

FRONT COVER: A girl waits in the port town of Turbo, Colombia for a boat departing for the Cacarica River basin. Local Afro-Colombian and indigenous groups say the immensely biodiverse river basin is under grave threat by the planned construction of a transnational highway connecting Panama and Colombia. Photo by Oriol Segon.

PAGE 2: CAR photos by Patrick Vinck

PAGE 6: Mobile phone photo by Patrick Vinck

PAGE 11: Photos by Neil Hendrick

BACK COVER: Photo by Patrick Vinck