

FILM SCREENING OF MANPOWER

Directed by Noam Kaplan

Join us for a film screening of the Israeli film “Manpower,” directed by award-winning filmmaker Noam Kaplan. Manpower delicately sketches a portrait of four men in crisis. Meir, a decorated police officer who barely earns a living, an Israeli-Filipino boy fighting for recognition, a taxi driver whose children are migrating to a distant country, and a veteran migrant worker who’s forced to decide whether to leave or to hide until trouble passes. Moving between scathing realism and subtle irony, the film raises questions of belonging and uprooting, exile and emigration, home and family.

Professor Guy Davidoff will introduce the film and give a short overview of the current context in Israel. This screening is part of our Spring Semester series, “Snapshots of Immigration: Inside Israel and out.” Dinner will be provided.
