

COMPARATIVE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW: THE CASE OF ISRAEL

Prof. Tamar Kricheli-Katz

The course will provide an introduction to the theory and practice of constitutional law. It will use the Israeli constitutional law as an illustration to general concepts, issues and doctrines of constitutional law. The main approach to these issues will be a general social science foundational approach. An emphasis will be put on the law in action and on the possibility of social change. The main subjects discussed include: human rights law, equality and antidiscrimination, social change and legal change, social rights, constitutionalism and judicial review, minority rights (with a focus on group rights of Arab citizens of Israel and of Women in Israel), state and religion, freedom of expression, equality and antidiscrimination, social rights, and constitutional limitations on privatization.

For more information on the courses that the Berkeley Institute has to offer, email us at berkeley\_institute@law.berkeley.edu

BerkeleyLaw
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

Berkeley Institute for
Jewish Law and Israel Studies

COMPARATIVE CONSTITUTIONAL
LAW: THE CASE OF ISRAEL

Fall, 2016
Legal Studies

LS 174, 3 Units
CCN 32984

Instructor:
Prof. Tami
Kricheli-Katz

Tues, Thurs
8-9:30 AM,
155 Kroeber