

Dear workshop participants,

Many thanks in advance for reading my paper; I'm looking forward to our discussion on March 3rd.

The paper you are reading, 'Consumer Choice and Collective Impact', was written as an invited contribution to the Oxford Handbook of Food Ethics, and so, it is focused specifically on the context of consumer food choices. But while that is its explicit focus, the main arguments in the paper generalize to other similar cases (what I call 'collective impact cases'). If you are interested in hearing more about the wider project that this paper is a part of, this post that I wrote for the "Philosopher" blog summarizes the basic ideas and how they fit together: <https://politicalphilosopher.net/2016/04/29/featured-philosopher-julia-nefsky/> And at the end of the post, you can see where I am going next with the project.

All the best, and see you in March!