

Winners and Losers in the 2018 Midterm Elections

Why it Happened and What it Means

Thursday, Nov. 15, 2018, 3-4:30pm
Social Science Matrix
820 Barrows Hall

Please join us for a panel reviewing the outcomes of the 2018 midterm elections, with an account of the factors producing this result. The discussion will provide competing perspectives on the implications of the elections for governance in the upcoming years—and for the shape of the 2020 presidential and congressional elections. The participants are leading scholars on Congress, public opinion, and voting behavior.

Panelists

Panelist
Robert Van Houweling
Associate Professor of Political Science,
UC Berkeley

Panelist
Thomas Mann
Senior Fellow, Brookings Institution; Resident Scholar, IGS, UC Berkeley

Panelist
Bill Whalen
Virginia Hobbs Carpenter Fellow in Journalism
at Hoover Institution

Moderator
Jack Citrin
Professor of Political Science, UC Berkeley

This event is co-sponsored by the Jack Citrin Center for Public Opinion Research, Berkeley Public Law and Policy Program, Institute for the Study of Societal Issues, and Social Science Matrix.

To learn more, visit <http://matrix.berkeley.edu/events>.

