China’s Guidelines for Patent Examination Have Been Amended Six Times Since 2010

- 2013/09/16 Amendment | 2014/03/12 Amendment | 2017/02/28 Amendment
- 2019/09/23 Amendment: Effective November 1, 2019
  - Human embryonic stem cells are now patent-eligible.
- 2019/12/31 Amendment: Effective February 1, 2020
  - Clarifying examination rules for patent applications in areas such as artificial intelligence, Internet+, big data and block chain.
- 2020/12/14 Amendment: Effective January 15, 2021
  - Amending certain provisions in Part II, Chapter 10, which concerns the examination of invention applications in the Chem/Biotech field.

“To serve the need of fast-developing new technology, respond to new requests from innovation entities on patent examination rules and methods, and improve patent examination quality and efficiency, CNIPA decides to amend the Guidelines for Patent Examination.”* Preamble of 2019/09/23 Amendment Wang et al., IPWatchdog, June 12, 2020
“It doesn't matter whether a cat is black or white; it’s a good cat as long as it catches mice.”

“We have to come together in what I call planetary realism.” “I thought of the world as being deeply interconnected. I had the sense that it wasn’t just ‘us against them,’ but rather that there was connectivity among all nations across a range of issues.”

From a return on investment perspective, NOW IS A BETTER TIME THAN EVER to file for patent protection in China for your inventions made in the U.S., because of the increasing protection for patent rights in China.
THANK YOU!
