

Miller Fellow: Maria Oliveira

Faculty Sponsor: Professor Katerina Linos

Project: Career Opportunities in International Law Compilation Project

Maria Oliveira is a 2L at Berkeley Law who is interested in the intersection of international law and foreign policy. She is a member of the Berkeley Journal of International Law and a contributor to its Travaux blog. She has gotten involved in pro bono projects such as the International Refugee Assistance Project and the Berkeley Law Afghanistan Project. She was also a 1L representative on the South Asian Law Students Association board and a Law delegate in the Graduate Assembly.

Maria graduated in 2021 from the University of Connecticut honors program with a BA in history and a minor in mathematics. In her junior and senior years, she served as the president of the UConn Stamford Student Government Association. She was a 2020 Phi Beta Kappa Key into Public Service Scholar, which was established to support promising future public servants and highlight how the study of liberal arts lends itself well to public service careers.

She worked as a Miller Fellow with Professor Linos on the Career Opportunities in International Law Compilation Project in Summer 2022, which will facilitate the pursuit of international legal careers for future Berkeley Law students and help other students like herself to tap into the rich networks that Berkeley Law has to offer.
