

ART, FINANCE, AND LAW INSTITUTE @ BERKELEY LAW

BACKGROUND:

The mission of the Art, Finance, and Law Institute is to be the international authority on matters at the intersection of art, finance, law, technology, and culture. The Institute will serve as a hub for academic research to educate students and other constituencies with an interest in the field. We aim to launch the Institute immediately after securing one year of funding, with the objective of then seeking longer-term resources.

The Institute holds an annual Art, Finance, and Law Symposium to showcase our work. The symposium explores the latest developments around securitization, fraud, and new frontier technologies, and cultural heritage issues. The audience includes collectors, art dealers, auctioneers, wealth managers, professional advisors, artists, investors, tech companies, entertainment companies, policy makers, lawyers and scholars from all over the world.
