Project: How International Organizations Learn from Crises

Elisabeth Mooring is a second-year law student at the University of California, Berkeley. She is a member of the Berkeley Law Mock Trial team and a participant in the Domestic Violence Field Placement program.

Prior to attending law school, Elisabeth worked in public education for nearly a decade. She taught high school English, and then became an Assistant Principal in Oakland Unified School District. Elisabeth received a Bachelor of Arts in English and Political Science, as well as a Master of Education in Curriculum & Instruction from Boston College. She also received a Master of Arts in School Leadership from the University of California, Berkeley's Principal Leadership Institute. In her free time, Elisabeth enjoys traveling, distance running, and creative writing.

As a Miller Fellow, Elisabeth is working with Professor Katerina Linos on research for her anticipated new book about how international organizations learn from crises.
